Frequently Asked Questions

Quick answers for volunteer families

Question	Answer
What is the NBO?	The Newborn Behavioral Observations (NBO) is a set of 18 gentle observations done together with parents, from birth to about 3 months. It helps parents see their baby's abilities, preferences, and needs. It was developed at the Brazelton Institute, Boston Children's Hospital.
Is it a test?	No. It is not a test, an evaluation, or a diagnosis. There is no pass or fail. It is a strengths-based visit that builds the relationship between you and your baby.
Why is it free?	I am an NBO trainee completing my certification, which requires observation visits with families. These visits are part of my training, so there is no charge. There is also no payment to you.
Is this a class?	No. It is a one-to-one observation visit with you and your baby, not a class or a course.
How old can my baby be?	From birth to about 3 months (corrected age if your baby was born early).
Will it hurt or upset my baby?	Nothing we do is painful. Many babies fuss or cry at some point, which is normal and tells us how your baby shows needs. We comfort your baby together, and we pause or stop whenever you or your baby need it.
Does my baby have to be undressed?	For a short time, your baby may be uncovered in a warm room so we can see movement. You may say no, and I will adapt.
Who can come?	A parent or another family member must be present for the whole visit. Please let me know who will be there.
How long does it take?	About [VISIT LENGTH], including time to talk and to complete your Parent Summary.
What if my baby is asleep, hungry, or crying?	That is fine. We go with your baby's lead. Baby's state tells us a lot, and we adjust the order of what we do.
Will you tell me if something is wrong?	I do not diagnose or give medical advice. If I notice anything I think you may want to talk through with your baby's doctor, I will tell you kindly and plainly. The decision is yours.
Will the visit be recorded?	Only if you agree. Recording is optional and has its own consent form. If you agree, you also choose whether short clips may be used for teaching at ConnectEd Kids Therapy Center, CORE, and SPACES, and whether the practitioner's mentor may view it. You may say no and still take part.
What happens to what you observe?	I write notes and a short narrative. ConnectEd Kids Therapy Center keeps your name and contact details private. For certification, I send documents to my mentor and the Brazelton Institute using only your baby's first initial, age, and gestational age.
Can I change my mind?	Yes, at any time, before or during the visit, or afterward. Tell me and I will stop, and I will delete your information or recordings if you ask.
What if my baby or I am sick that day?	Please message us and we will reschedule.
What language will the visit be in?	English, Filipino, or a mix (Taglish), whichever you prefer. Tell me if you would like a different language or an interpreter.
What does "trainee" mean?	I am training in the NBO and working toward certification with a mentor. I will always tell you this at the start so you know who is visiting.

Question	Answer
Can I have a second visit?	Possibly, at least a week after the first, if you would like it and my schedule allows. It is never required.

Free practice observation offered by a licensed practitioner in NBO training at ConnectEd Kids Therapy Center. It is not a medical examination, diagnosis, or medical advice.
